'On Sunday morning, our head boy and head girl (Megan and Joe) took part in the remembrance day service. They laid a wreath at the cenotaph in remembrance of the men and woman who have been killed or injured in the service of our country.'

They shall not grow old,
As we that are left grow old;
Age shall not weary them,
Nor the years condemn.

At the going down of the sun
And in the morning,
We will remember them.

All about my tomb

Building my tomb was really fun because I love making things! It was amazing because we got to put in what ever we want in there, I put in my Tutankhamun and a few shelves, with ancient pots and I drew some necklaces in there. It was just amazing it was so fun. I also think it lets you show other people what you really like doing and how you do it. I personally liked it a lot, it was really good fun making the tomb it was just trying to get the right things in the right place.

I made a tomb for my homework on the Egyptians topic. I used Lego to make it and it has a horse and cart inside. It has a Tutankhamun's tomb.

There was also some gems in the tomb and on the tomb. There are some things that I would of taken into the afterlife. The Lego colours are yellow and white. There are two guards guarding all of the gems. There is also a dog in the tomb. In the tomb the Tutankhamun has a zombie head. By the coffin there is a lantern.

I made my tomb for my homework on the Egyptian topic. I used a Karrimor shoe box and half a Choco Rice box. My Grandad's friend Lynne helped me by printing out a picture of Tutankhamun and finding me some hieroglyphs off the internet. I have painted my tomb by using green and orange paint. I also used blue and black paint. I used a bingo marker to paint spots on the green area of floor and walls. I made some blue pots and added beads inside, although they went everywhere. I also made a tomb and I added my picture of Tutankhamun on top of. There are stairs in the middle of the tomb which are orange and have hieroglyphs.
